

Absolutely. Forcing LECS to allow other ISPs on their networks is critical to competition. Competition is essential not just for pricing, but other things such as customer service.

LECs have proven that they will do as little as possible and charge as much as possible if they aren't forced through legislation or competition in the marketplace.